TO THE UNITED CONFEDERATE VETERANS
ASSEMBLED IN CHARLOTTE:

This Reunion, the first to be held on North Carolina soil, represents the happy realization of a hope long cherished by our people.

Since 1865, North Carolina has been the beneficiary of the patriotism, courage, and changeless devotion of the Confederate soldiers. They saved our civilization and it is a high privilege to welcome them now in the name of a grateful people.

O. MAX GARDNER.

F. M. REDD, MAYOR

EXECUTIVE OFFICE
CITY OF CHARLOTTE
NORTH CAROLINA

The heart overflows as we welcome you, Veterans of the Confederate Army. Neither time nor changing circumstance has dimmed our pride in the glory of your deeds or our love for the spirit of Dixieland. Though all of us glory in the Union in which we live today, we of the Southland cannot but cherish that cause which her sons and her daughters so valiantly defended.

We welcome you. May your stay and this convention bring to you the re-creation of sweet memories, the exhilaration of new hopes, and old comrades, and convivial gatherings -- may it bring to you happiness.

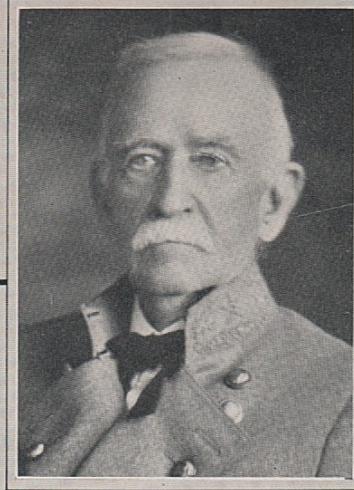

We welcome also the Sons of Confederacy, and every organization and individual with whose presence we are honored on this occasion.

"Small in number, but their valor tried in war, and glowing".

GREETINGS FROM MRS. A. MC. D. WILSON, President General, 209 Fourteenth Street N. E.
Atlanta, Ga.

"OUR HEROES IN GRAY"
"Lord God of Hosts be with us yet, Lest we forget, Lest we forget."

Filled with thanksgiving that so many are privileged to again meet around the sacred altar of Patriotic Devotion, memory swings back to the days of old, when you, among the flower of the young manhood of the South, answered the bugle call, and marched away to the sound of Martial Music, in defense of the righteous cause of self government.

For four long years the unequal struggle left on many a battle field wounded and dying, with no Red Cross nurses, inadequate hospital and diminishing medical supplies.

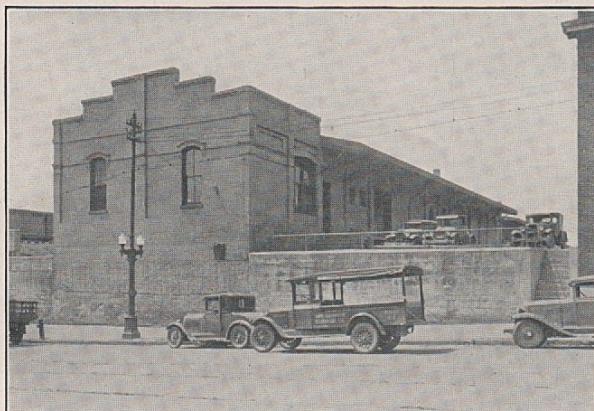

Almost simultaneously another army swiftly and quietly bonded itself together, and from every town and hamlet responded volunteers, alert for the call of duty, for the Ladies' Aid Societies. Then when guns were staked and many a mother's son lay wounded on battlefields or filled hastily made graves, these same daughters of the South gathered to give a fairer resting place, or to send to loved ones the mortal remains, planning the while to set apart a day upon which to pay tribute in flowers and eulogy. Thus came our Southern Memorial Day.

Each year, until the present time, when this devoted band, changing with the passing years, flung the torch of patriotic fire to younger hands,—have carried on, and its representatives from every point of the compass extend to you, our Honored and Beloved Veterans, most cordial greetings and pledge to future generations the sacred trust, bequeathed to them by their sainted mothers, to "tell the story of the glory of the men who wore the Gray; and like the Vestal Virgins of old, to keep the patriotic fires burning upon the altars of our Southland, till the dawning of the morning, when the mists have rolled away."

Charlotte and Mecklenburg County

BY MRS. J. A. FORE, Charlotte, N. C.

M ECKLENBURG COUNTY was settled by the Scotch Irish about 1750 and the county government formed in 1762. The General Assembly of North Carolina passed an Act November 7, 1768, creating the Town of Charlotte, named in honor of Queen Charlotte, wife of George III, with Thomas Polk, Abram Alexander, George Allen, Richard Barry and John Frohock as commissioners to control the town government and sell the lots.

The Navy Yard at Charlotte, N. C.

The Scotch Irish being Presbyterian in faith, built Churches and Schools throughout the county, and established in Charlotte the first college in North Carolina called Queens Museum, later changed to Liberty Hall. This institution was the nursery of the Independence movement, that resulted in the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence on May 20, 1775.

When Cornwallis entered North Carolina, in September, 1780, expecting to overrun it as he had South Carolina, he met with such a warm reception in the little town of Charlotte, by Col. W. R. Davie commanding 250 patriots, in the engagement known as the "Battle of Charlotte," that the British General designated the town and Mecklenburg County as "A Veritable Hornets' Nest," and made a hasty retreat from North Carolina on hearing of the Battle of King's Mountain in this vicinity, after a stay of only two weeks.

Two Presidents were born in Mecklenburg County, Andrew Jackson and James K. Polk.

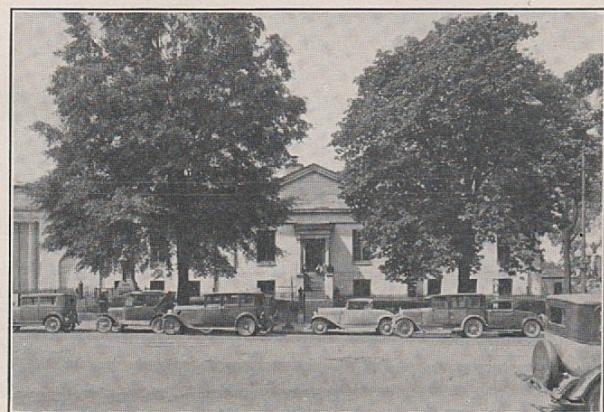

N. C. MILITARY INSTITUTE, UNDER GEN. D. H. HILL

In 1859 Major Daniel Harvey Hill, later General Hill, built and established here the North Carolina Military Institute. This building is being used as one of the public schools and is known as the D. H. Hill School.

When the war opened in 1861, there were about 200 cadets in the Institute, who volunteered for service and became drill masters in the training camps of North Carolina and later officers in the Confederate Army.

Two companies, the Charlotte Grays and the Hornets Nest Riflemen were mustered in the service, and left Charlotte for Raleigh April 16, 1861, although the State did not secede until May 20, 1861.

They were the nucleus of the First North Carolina Regiment commanded by Col. D. H. Hill, that took part in the Battle of Bethel, the first battle and victory of the war, early in June. Colonel Hill was promoted to General after this battle.

MECKLENBURG IN THE WAR

Mecklenburg County sent twenty-one companies into the war, composed of 2,732 soldiers, although the county had only 2,021 voters.

mad, far removed from the scene of warfare, the Confederate government considered the town a safe place for an army post and many other establishments. The first of these was the Confederate Navy Yard, where guns were cast and ordnance manufactured. The men and machinery from the Norfolk Navy Yard were removed to Charlotte after the capture of Norfolk by the Federals in 1862, with Capt. Ashton Ramsey in charge.

Commander Page was placed in command of the entire post with headquarters in the United States Mint Building, which is still in use. Charlotte was also made a Depot for commissary supplies, housed in what is now the Central Hotel. Hospitals were located on South Tryon Street and a Medical Laboratory in the North Carolina Military Institute, now the D. H. Hill School, where medicines were manufactured from herbs and bark and the women of Mecklenburg met to make bandages and perform the "Red Cross" work of that day.

CHARLOTTE AS A MILITARY RENDEZVOUS

General Beauregard, commanding the Army of the West, had his headquarters here after he retired from Columbia on the approach of Sherman. President Davis, in the "Rise and Fall of the Confederacy," says, "General Johnston on February 23rd at Charlotte relieved General Beauregard and assumed command. General Johnston's force, when he took command, amounted to 16,000 Infantry and 4,000 Cavalry." General Johnston then proceeded to fight the Battle of Bentonville.

MRS. JEFFERSON DAVIS IN CHARLOTTE

Charlotte was also a refuge for Mrs. Davis and family for several weeks before President Davis

In the party with Mrs. Davis, was her sister, Miss Howell, and also the daughters of Mr. Trenholm, Secretary of the Treasury. When Mrs. Davis heard of Lee's surrender and that Mr. Davis was making his way South, she became frantic with alarm.

The troops under Captain Parker, who had the treasure train in charge, prepared to convey it to a place of safety and Mrs. Davis determined to join this party and left Charlotte two days before Mr. Davis arrived from Greensboro.

PRESIDENT DAVIS AND CABINET IN CHARLOTTE

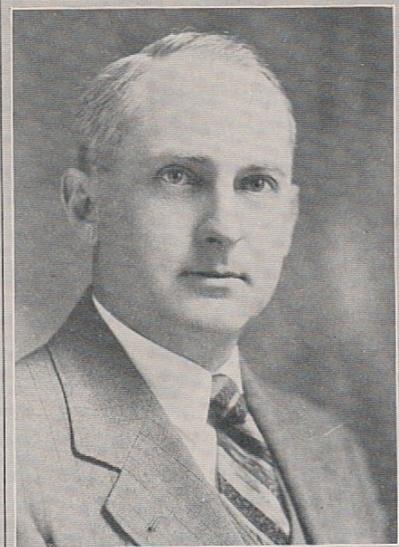

Mr. Davis and his entire Cabinet, composed of Secretaries Benjamin, Mallory, Trenholm, Reagen, Breckinridge, and Attorney George Davis, were in Charlotte eight days, from the 18th of April to the 26th. While here, the last deliberations of the Confederacy took place and the surrender of General Joseph Johnston and all troops east of the Mississippi, 90,000 in number (See "Rise and Fall of the Confederacy") was authorized at a meeting of the President and Cabinet, with General Johnston. The Confederate Government ceased to exist when the surrender occurred on April 26th at the end of the armistice, between Johnston and Sherman.

While the Cabinet was in Charlotte the official meeting place was the Directors' room of the Bank of North Carolina, which was for many years afterward, the home of the Charlotte Observer. A bronze tablet has been placed on the building to commemorate the event, by the Stonewall Jackson Chapter, U. D. C.

On entering the town, Mr. Davis was handed a telegram, announcing the death of Lincoln.

LETTER FROM GENERAL A. T. GOODWYN
Commander-in-Chief, United Confederate Veterans

MY DEAR COMRADES, DAUGHTERS AND SONS:

We have lived to see the thoughtful people of our whole country at last awakening to a recognition of the truth of our sacred cause. The cause based upon the principles inherited from our Revolutionary ancestors in their struggle for political, economic, and religious freedom. If this government is to perpetuate, it must be maintained on these principles. It is gratifying indeed to find the scholarship of the whole country appealing for a true history of the War Between the States. I have joyful confidence in the thought that our Veterans, daughters and sons will do their part in continuing this work for a true History—doing justice to all concerned until the errors or falsities evolved by hate and envy will have been overcome by the truth.

Stonewall Jackson, The Beloved

BY LEARY W. ADAMS

CONFEDERATE VETERANS who helped flank Hooker at Chancellorsville, who stood their ground at first and second Manassass, and who marched in their sleep up and down the Shenandoah Valley will have a chance here to fondle the personal effects of their great chieftain, Stonewall Jackson.

His field glasses, his combination knife and fork, the vast array of medals and badges given his widow have been placed in a cabinet here at the home of his grand-daughter, Mrs. E. R. Preston, on Queens Road, so that his old soldiers may look upon them once more. There is something else there, too. It is a portrait of the General which his widow has pronounced the most perfect likeness of him.

Until her death here at Charlotte in 1915, Mrs. Jackson frequently stood before the picture for half an hour at the time, said Mr. Preston. "She has told me often that this picture is a 'speaking likeness' of the General. 'As near a likeness as it is possible to make,' she would add." . . .

Also, at the Preston home are the priceless messages which Lee and Jackson exchanged during their victorious campaigns, including the brief message of less than 100 words which Jackson wrote just before he was wounded at Chancellorsville, invoking the blessings of Providence and expressing his determination to attack at once; and the other equally famous message from Lee to Jackson, urging that for the good of the country he would have chosen to have been wounded in his stead.

Jackson's sword and the uniform in which he was wounded are in the Museum in Richmond.

At the request of Major Edmond R. Wiles, manager of the Confederate Reunion at Charlotte, Mrs. Preston has put these effects of her famed grandfather in glass cases so that they can be viewed by his old soldiers who share his fame.

Jackson loved his men, and he didn't ask them to do anything that he wouldn't do. He showed that at first Manassass and again at Cedar Mountain. When his men were being mowed down by a heavy flanking fire at the Battle of Cedar Mountain he led the charge personally which turned the tide.

This penniless orphan, Thomas Jonathan Jackson, who by sheer force of character and determination went through West Point, has justly been given a place of great fame among the military leaders of all ages because he is one of the few undefeated generals in history. He was never involved in a disaster. He fought no Battle of Waterloo, engineered no Moscow retreat and was never surprised or successfully flanked.

No one familiar with Jackson's thorough methods and his deep humility of service can imagine him being caught at Waterloo like the bombastic First Napoleon was by a sunken road. Jackson would have known all about the hidden road—perhaps before the battle began.

Jackson fought in nine major battles and was victorious in all. At Chancellorsville, if he had been wounded two hours later, he would probably have occupied the United States ford and surrounded Hooker and his whole army in its wilderness prison. He had almost accomplished that purpose after driving the whole right wing of the Federal Army before him for three hours. He had it completely turned.

Jackson was a disciple of the first Napoleon, urging his principle to always attack the enemy before he is fully prepared, but he and Lee vi-lated both of Napoleon's principles of "never fight a battle with an open flank or an uncovered retreat" at Chancellorsville and won a great victory.

Someone has suggested that maybe the reason for Jackson's success lies in the fact he had been out of the army for a long time, had been teaching and brought a fresh viewpoint into military strategy and tactics. This may have more weight than a suggestion when it is remembered that both Sherman and Grant, the outstanding generals of the other side, were out of the army when the war began; and that Nathan Bedford Forrest, whom Sherman hated perhaps more than anybody else and whom Sherman ranked as the greatest cavalry genius in the history of the world, also was an outsider. Forrest was not even a military man, but like Jackson he brought remarkable originality into the strategy and tactics of battle. These men were out of any army rut. They did things with fresh originality, and they got results.

Thousands of Southerners and some Northerners believe that if Jackson had lived the war would have had a different ending. Certainly Lee would not have fought Gettysburg as he did fight it, if he had had a prompt executive like Jackson there. There is nothing in grieving over what is lost, but it is interesting to speculate and wonder what might have happened had Jackson been spared. It was a bitter ordeal for the South that after all of Jackson's enemies had failed to harm him he had to be shot down by his own men, and that Longstreet was shot down by his own men in almost the identical manner while completing an attack to turn the enemy's wing and while in the moment of a great victory.

Such is war.

North Carolina In The Confederacy

BY HENRY M. LONDON, of Raleigh

Commander N. C. Division Sons of Confederate Veterans

WHILE not desiring to detract from the self-sacrifice and bravery of troops from other states, that history may be kept straight it is well to recall briefly the gallant part taken by North Carolina in those times which tried men's souls. With a white population in 1860 of 629,942 and 115,000 voters, North Carolina sent 125,000 soldiers to the Confederate armies, composing eighty-four regiments and eighteen battalions, exceeding by 23,000 any other southern state. Over 41,000 were killed or died in the service. There were seven major generals from this state, of whom three were killed, namely: Pender, Ramseur, and Whiting. There were twenty-six brigadier generals from this state, of whom four were killed and nearly all the others wounded. North Carolina troops won the first victory at Bethel on June 10, 1861, they were furthest to the front at Gettysburg and Chickamauga and they fired the last volley at Appomattox Court House.

At Gettysburg 2,592 Confederates were killed and 12,707 wounded, and 3,155 Federals were killed and 14,529 were wounded. Of the killed, 700 were from North Carolina, 435 from Georgia, 399 from Virginia, 258 from Mississippi, 217 from South Carolina and 204 from Alabama. The three brigades which lost the most men in that battle were Pettigrew's North Carolina (190 killed), Davis's Mississippi, in which was one North Carolina regiment (180 killed), and Daniel's North Carolina (165 killed). Pickett's division of three brigades had 214 killed. No brigade in Pickett's division lost as many killed and wounded as the Twenty-sixth North Carolina regiment, whose loss was eighty-six killed and 502 wounded, which was the heaviest loss of any regiment in either army in any battle of the war. There were sixteen brigades of Confederates in the first day's battle, of which seven were from North Carolina. In what is called "Pickett's charge" there were nineteen Virginia regiments and fifteen North Carolina regiments. At Reams Station in August, 1864, after the first efforts of other Confederates had failed, the three North Carolina brigades of Cooke, Lane and MacRae, consisting of only 1,750 men, routed the enemy and captured 2,100 prisoners. No troops were better armed and equipped than those from North Carolina and our state was the only one that clothed her troops during the entire war. She also furnished clothing for other troops and at the surrender had 92,000 suits of uniforms on hand and great stores of blankets and leather. At the close of the war North Carolina's commissary was feeding about half of Lee's army.

A Message from the Commander-in-Chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans

Your Commander-in-Chief, with grateful appreciation, and ever mindful of the confidence placed in him, as evidenced by you at Little Rock, last May, when you, by unanimous action, bestowed upon him the highest honor within your gift, extends warmest greetings, with the hope that the past year has been one of happiness and prosperity.

The greeting of old friends and making of new ones, in the eight states it has been his privilege to visit officially, in attendance at State Reunions, has in a large degree recompensed him for the sacrifice necessary, in order to fully discharge an obligation assumed when the honor was accepted, as your Commander-in-Chief.

The intimate contact of the past two years resulting in the forming of bonds of lasting friendship between the Heroes of the Fast Fading Gray Line, and the Commander-in-Chief, because of his official connection with the Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth Reunions, will be remembered as the happiest experiences of his life.

May your declining years be brightened in the passing, by the ever increasing assurance from every section of this great land, of the unqualified justness of your Cause. This Country owes you a debt of gratitude that never can and never will be repaid. So long as there is a remaining Confederate Veteran, there must be Confederate Reunions; the most colorful, unique, and unusual events held in any Land by any People.

DAVIDSON COLLEGE

Twenty miles from Charlotte over one of North Carolina's finest roads is the beautiful campus and plant of Davidson College.

Davidson, 93 years old, is one of the South's oldest and best known educational institutions. In addition to the strictly educational opportunities, Davidson gives a training in Christian statesmanship of the Woodrow Wilson type. (Woodrow Wilson was a student at Davidson in 1873-1874).

Attendance of Davidson is limited to approximately 640. Five hundred and sixty have already registered for 1929-30 and paid their registration fee of $10.00.

More than 11,000 people have contributed to the resources of the College. Davidson now offers an attractive, safe and profitable investment to those who have funds to invest on the annuity plan, or by bequest.

Inauguration of Jefferson Davis as Provisional
President of the Confederate States at Montgomery, Ala., February 18th, 1861.

SCENE OF THE INAUGURATION OF JEFFERSON DAVIS, FIRST AND ONLY PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERACY

Mrs. I. W. Faison (Nee Sallie Yates) of Charlotte, North Carolina is Ex-Vice-President General of the United Daughter of the Confederacy, Ex-President of the North Carolina Division U. D. C., is North Carolina Director for Arlington Monument Association, is North Carolina Director for President Jefferson Davis Monument Association and Charter member and Trustee of the Stonewall Jackson Training School. Mrs. J. T. Burney of Waynesboro, Miss., is Third Vice-President General and Director of the Children of the Confederacy. Mrs. W. C. N. Merchant, is President General of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and is from Chatham, Virginia. Miss Robena Webb is Great Grand-daughter of Jefferson Davis.

A MESSAGE TO THE UNITED CONFEDERATE VETERANS FROM THE PRESIDENT GENERAL, UNITED DAUGHTERS OF THE CONFEDERACY

Fate denied victory to the Confederate soldier, but has granted him glorious immortality. Those who fell among the roar of cannon and the shriek of minie balls and the clashing of sabres, died for their beloved South, you have lived for it.

From Appomattox, where the God of battle touched each ragged gray cap with the badge of knighthood, you turned to a land laid waste by war, to homes marked by but a mound of ashes and to a family whose destitution equaled your own.

You beat your swords into ploughshares and your spears into pruning hooks, you wrested from the hand of fate the reward of your undaunted courage; without the straw of working capital you made the bricks of progress, with poverty as your taskmaster you erected upon the ruins of war an edifice of peace and transformed penury into prosperity. Your scars are your badge of honor, suffering in the cause of Right, has traced lines upon your cheek, but the triumph of might is but for a season; victory does not grow ideals and frequently the defeated gain more from defeat than the victors from their hour of triumph.

The sons of the South have borne leading parts in wars subsequent to that in which you offered yourselves a willing sacrifice, because these sons have felt in their veins the blood by which the soil of the South is sanctified, by which defeat was glorified and through which we, your descendants, are purified.

Your justification is the constitution of the United States received from your fathers, and the United Daughters of the Confederacy exist that your obedience to its tenets may be recognized; from generation to generation we shall teach our sons who claim the same birthright that Truth, Courage and Patriotism endure forever.

It was a very happy thought on the part of Richard Battle Stitt, who is the son of the late Captain William Morrison Stitt, one of the Boys in Gray, who served the Confederacy until he was wounded in the Battle of Chancellorsville—to Commemorate this Thirty-ninth Confederate Reunion in Stone.

It is to Mr. Stitt we are indebted for this monument, for it was he who brought it before the citizens of Charlotte and Mecklenburg County and collected from them the funds to erect this monument.

This monument bears the inscription on the front side:

GLORIA VICTIS

In commemoration of the Thirty-ninth Annual Reunion of the United Confederate Veterans at Charlotte, N. C., June 4-5-6-7, 1929.

A State and City's tribute of love; in grateful recognition of the services of the Confederate Soldiers whose heroism in war and fidelity in peace have never been surpassed.

Accepting the arbitrament of war, they preserved the Anglo-Saxon civilization of the South and became Master Builders in a Reunited Country.

Some Excellent Types of Negro Schools in North Carolina
Built with the aid of the Julius Rosenwald Fund
Cooperating With the State Board of Education

The Progress of Negro Education in the South

The development of negro education is a part of the modern progress in education in the Southern States. Recovering slowly from the effects of civil war, its school system has been slowly progressing. It is encouraging to note that this forward movement is more and more including the negro in its program.

Since 1913 great stimulus in the encouragement of negro education has been: The Julius Rosenwald Fund, co-operating with the State Boards of Education of the fourteen Southern States, in negro education, health and social relations.

Present assets of the fund, $22,000,000, income and principal to be spent, at the request of the giver within twenty-five years after the founder's death.

OBJECTIVES OF THE FUND

(1) To assist in improving conditions among negro groups such as (a) home ownership, (b) co-operative farming, and (c) conservative methods in organization.

(2) Health, (a) through distribution of medical service to the average man, (b) mental hygiene.

(3) Social relations, involving the whole problem of living together in organized society, such as economics, care of dependents, prevention of crime, and individual adjustment to group life.

(4) Education, the construction and equipment of modern school buildings in rural sections and smaller towns.

From 1912 to 1928 the fourteen Southern States have spent in rural school construction for negroes, $20,000,000 in erecting 4,354 Rosenwald schools. Of this amount the negroes themselves gave $3,913,837; while citizens by direct gifts, $903,253; public tax funds, $12,156,438, and the Julius Rosenwald Fund, $3,333,852. These schools house 600,000 pupils and give employment to 12,000 teachers. These are 31,838 rural negro teachers in the Southern States.

The State that has made the greatest progress in negro education and which may be recognized as typical is North Carolina.

She is justly proud of her record. Since 1915 she has, with the aid of the Rosenwald Fund, erected 728 buildings with 2,150 class rooms, accommodating 96,750 pupils.

These schools cost $4,206,720.00.

Does It Pay To Educate The Negro?

BY DR. H. L. McCROREY, President

Johnson C. Smith University, Charlotte, N. C.

Let Johnson C. Smith University, located at Charlotte, N. C., answer this question by its product covering a period of more than a half century.

The three main objectives of the institution whose motto is "Enter to learn, go out to serve," have been the training of preachers, teachers, and leaders in other walks of life realizing that without an educated ministry, properly trained teachers, and intelligent, sane and safe leadership the race cannot hope to get very far, as these are three prime factors in race building.

It is worthy of note that not one student of the institution during its history of sixty-two years has ever been convicted in the courts for crime, and that from the records of the lives and work of the 3,433 graduates sent out, between ninety and ninety-five per cent of them have made good and useful citizens. Thirteen States, the District of Columbia, South America and Africa, and seven denominations are represented in the present student body. The majority of colored Presbyterian ministers in the South and many of other denominations and hosts of teachers are the product of Johnson C. Smith University.

Mrs. M. D. Biddle and Col. Wm. R. Myers, whose gifts in money and land, respectively, made possible the founding of the institution, gave in faith not knowing the ability of the Negro to acquire an education nor how he would use it after acquired. Mrs. Johnson C. Smith and Mr. James B. Duke, the recent generous donors, based their gifts on evidence of what education has done and can do for the Negro by the product sent out by the institution during its history of more than a half century.

“Carolina First on the Ground”

GREENSBORO, N.C.

Air View of the Business Section of Greensboro

INCORPORATED in 1808, Greensboro has grown steadily and substantially in population, in resources, in industrial development, in civic improvements and in interest in education. It is a well developed city wherein provision for every phase of the activities of daily life has been considered.

In Population, from an insignificant beginning, the growth now shows 52,000 inhabitants living under conditions that are conducive to the development of life in well-rounded activity.

In material resources, the latest figures show assessed valuation of property at $103,300,000 within the corporate limits. With banking resources of nearly $37,000,000, deposits of over $25,000,000 and bank clearings exceeding $312,000,000, the importance of the city as a financial center is well established.

In industry, the development has been from a very small inception to the present important position of 141 plants employing nearly 9,000 workers, industrial payroll of approximately $12,000,000 per annum and value of products exceeding $40,000,000.

In civic improvements, public buildings of attractive design have been erected, the safety of traffic has been protected by underpasses and overpasses at places where railway lines intersect public thoroughfares, adequate water supply for industrial and domestic uses as well as for fire protection has been provided, the fire department is efficient as is indicated by the substantial reduction in fire losses during the past few years and Greensboro established in 1928 the enviable record of fire loss of only 76 cents per capita.

In education, there are six colleges with an enrollment of more than 4,000 students and 28 public schools with 9,300 pupils enrolled.

During the past three years costly additions to the public school system were completed and others are under construction, including a group of new buildings for the High School.

The orderly development of the city is assured and protected by zoning and city planning commissions. Health and property are safeguarded by efficient protective departments of the municipal government. The World War Memorial Stadium, seating capacity over 9,000, is frequently used for athletic events and is recognized as a notable achievement in civic enterprise.

Transportation facilities are excellent and the State highways by which Greensboro is served afford the best possible facilities for the numerous bus lines which arrive at and depart from a modern terminal station equipped with all convenience needed by travelers.

On May 1, 1928, service was inaugurated on the New York-Atlanta Airmail Route and as Greensboro is a scheduled stop on that route, the added facility for quick communication with the principal cities of the country has been of great benefit to the city.

Industrial Charlotte

BY HAROLD D. LESLIE, Manager Charlotte Industrial Bureau

The Charlotte Industrial Bureau has been established for the purpose of serving industries already located in Charlotte, and of furnishing authentic information regarding industrial conditions to those industries which may be looking for new location in the South.

On the following pages you will find the announcements of several manufacturing plants which have come to Charlotte and prospered. There is room for many more, and conditions are unusually favorable for those industries which use textiles as raw materials, such as dyeing, bleaching and finishing, shirts, overalls and clothing; for those industries which serve the textile trade, such as textile machinery, chemicals and dyestuffs; and for those which supply the home needs of our people, such as meat packing, canning, shoes, tires, building materials, etc.

The biggest single item of interest to a manufacturer is labor, and we have in Charlotte a surplus of intelligent, loyal, 100 per cent American labor, easily trained, and inclined to be contented with decent treatment and a fair wage. We have trained them to make full fashioned hosiery, assemble Ford cars, build quality automobile tires, make textile machinery and to perform numerous other operations requiring a high degree of skill.

The wage scale, however, is still based on the cotton mills, which comprised the original industry of Charlotte.

The Charlotte Industrial Bureau has on file complete data regarding labor, wages, taxes, power, real estate, climate, insurance, transportation, etc., which is available to any one interested, whether a manufacturer or not.

We invite you to make free use of the facilities of the Bureau.

And while we are on the subject of Textiles in the South, we want to make a plea here right now with the young women to gear gingham dresses, use gingham in their homes; curtains, draperies—and many other things, for Cotton is still King in the South, and it is to the Textile Industry we owe our present prosperity, and it is through cotton and its manufacture that the South found her way back from the dark days of Reconstruction.

The McLaren Autocrat

Extends A Hand Of

GREETING

Too big for a hoop but just right for a seat

This little girl sent her picture all the way from Iowa Park, Texas, to extend her best wishes to every gallant, gray-clad warrior. Her name is Frances Park, and it is easy to see she is sold on the mammoth 42x9 McLaren Autocrat Tire used on her Daddy's truck.

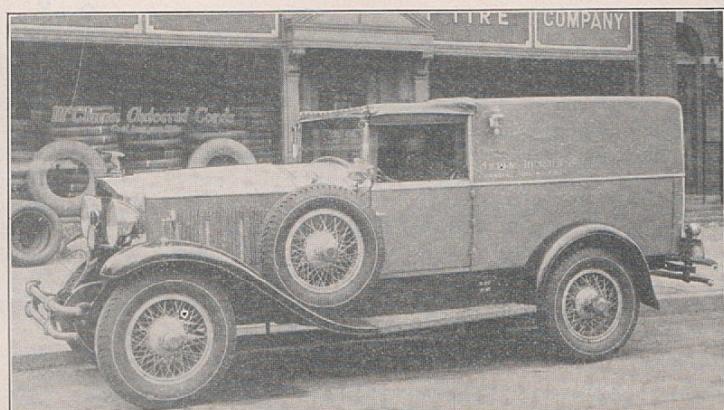

The delivery truck shown here operates in the service of Tilden Thurber Corporation. It is an example of how progressive merchants are catering to the newer demand for beauty and fine appearance by putting their delivery equipment on Autocrat Universals.

A PEACE-TIME Army of Gray is a thing unknown. The army of the Stars and Bars was organized on the eve of battle and disbanded at the close of the last day's fight.

Just as eagerly does the McLaren Autocrat accept an opportunity to perform. It is not a peace-time tire—it is not a tire that wants to soldier in its own backyard. It is a tire that wants to go out in the field from the very day it is purchased and serve constantly and consistently until it is finally retired from service—a veteran of many hard-fought battles—honorably discharged with all the glory and honor of a battle well fought.

is made right here in Charlotte

This Corporation is a North Carolina corporation, and was organized by Mr. Wm. Nebel in 1923. Before coming to Charlotte, Mr. Nebel organized his first hosiery company in Paterson, N. J. in 1913. Mr. Nebel was born in Saxony, Germany but since his naturalization in 1912 has been very active in political, civic and religious affairs, and his advent into Charlotte in 1923 opened a new industrial era for this community. Mr. Nebel is Director of the Chamber of Commerce—and in addition—says that he is now a "Southerner, Warp and Filling." Nebel and Tar Hellia Hosiery is handled in Charlotte by Efrids and Belks and other stores in the South.

THE DUKE POWER COMPANY

Its Relation to the Industrial Development of Charlotte, and North Carolina

80,000 H. P. PLANT OF THE DUKE POWER COMPANY NEAR CHARLOTTE

The industrial and economic development of Piedmont Carolinas, which has been of such magnitude, during the past two decades, that it has attracted the attention of the entire business world, has been due more largely than to any other factor to electric power, which has been made available in almost unlimited quantities by the Duke Power Company and its affiliated interests. This great power system, with its huge hydro-electric and steam-electric generating plants and with more than 4,000 miles of transmission and distribution lines, furnishes the motive power for a vast majority of the industrial establishments of this section, relieving these industries of the necessity of establishing and operating individual power plants of their own.

In addition to supplying power for the industries of this section the Duke interests supply electricity for light and other electric service to approximately 200 thriving cities and towns in Piedmont Carolinas. Approximately 12,000 homes in the cities and towns served by the Southern Public Utilities Company, the North Carolina Public Service Company and other Duke companies are using electric ranges. Probably an equal number of homes are equipped with Kelvinators and other electric household refrigerators.

As an instance of what power is doing for industry in Piedmont Carolinas, it is interesting to note that more than 300 cotton mills, with a total of 6,750,000 spindles, are operated from the lines of this one company, this being more than half the spindles in the Carolinas, considerably more than one-third the spindles in the South and approximately 20 per cent of the active spindles in all the cotton mills in America.

North Carolina's Leading Industry—

The Reclamation of the American Boy

The Stonewall Jackson Training School

Named in honor of the South's great and beloved General Stonewall Jackson

THE SECRET of the power of the great Stonewall Jackson lay in the fact that he was able to marshal his forces in battle, overcoming seeming defeat in victory, against great odds.

That is the spirit that has inspired and animated this institution since the opening in January, 1909. On that day, there was a scholarship of just one boy, a building located on the most barren and unpromising site in North Carolina.

Today the State Highway going Northward just 16 miles from Charlotte passes through green lawns, spreading trees, profusion of lovely flowers, stately buildings, wide walks and drives—The Stonewall Jackson Training and Industrial School, the pride of the citizens of Cabarrus County, and of the Great State of North Carolina.

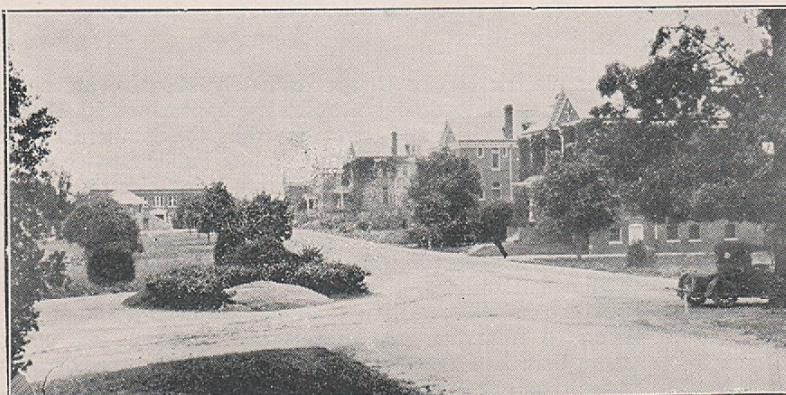

The Bridge Over the State Highway

This School stands for the reclamation of the greatest of the State's resources, THE AMERICAN BOY. Besides the Superintendent, Charles E. Boger, and Assistant Superintendent, J. C. Fisher, there is a staff of fifty-two men and women which includes the office force, school teachers, trades instructors and matrons.

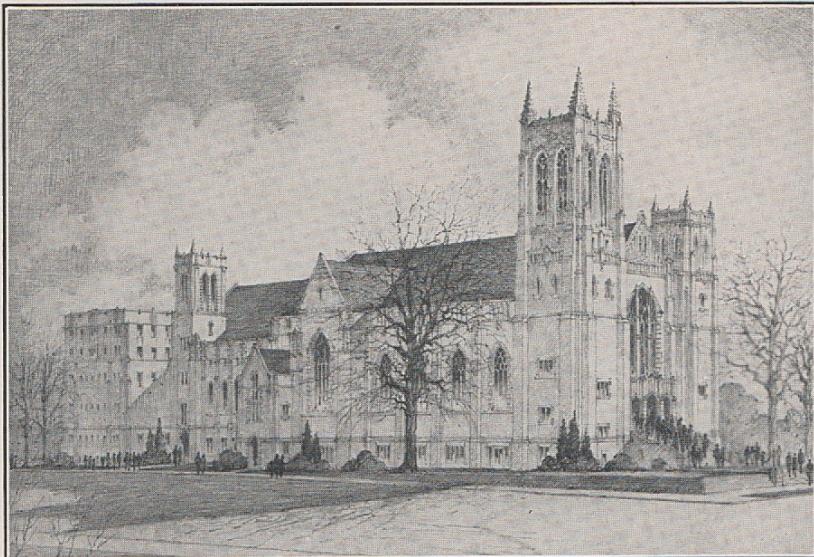

Fifteen cottages, the Cannon Memorial Building, the Receiving Cottage and various other buildings provide housing and working rooms for this small army.

The beautiful flowers represent the work of the boys. Many a boy while working to beautify his school unconsciously cultivates the blossoms of courage and honesty.

The educational, religious, recreational and industrial sides of life are all considered in the training of the boys at the Jackson Training School.

A cooler smoke
in a drier pipe!

Pipe smokers tell us...

- 1 CUT FOR PIPES ONLY
- 2 BIG FLAKES THAT BURN SLOW
- 3 AND SMOKE COOL
- 4 SWEET TO THE END
- 4 NO SOGGY HEEL

Granger's fine old Burley would never smoke with such cool relish were it not for the shaggy "rough cut." Right!

Nor would the good taste be there except for Wellman's 1870 method—a priceless old time tobacco secret, now ours exclusively. Sensibly packed in foil, hence ten cents.
